

The Fury of the Wind, The Raging of the Sea

Text: Eric Schumacher, © 2005 ThousandTongues.org

Tune: LEOMINSTER by George W. Martin (1821-81)

From <http://www.thousandtongues.org/songs/hymntexts/the-fury-of-the-wind-the-raging-of-the-sea>

Song Flow: 1,2,3,4

- 1 The fury of the wind,
The raging of the sea,
How small a whisper do we hear
Of our God's majesty!
The thunder of His pow'r,
O, who can understand?
Before the fullness of His wrath
O, who of us could stand?
- 2 "Shall man find fault with God?"
He asks of man below.
"Now, gird yourself to answer Me.
And tell Me, if you know:
Who made the earth and sea?
Who speaks and stars obey?
Who plays with creatures of the deep?
Who gives the beast its prey?"
- 3 You, Lord, can do all things,
And none can stay Your hand.
I uttered what I did not know
And could not understand.
Before Your greatness, Lord,
I fall upon my face.
And, by such glory stripped of pride,
I cast myself on grace.
- 4 The raging wind and sea
Cause me to flee to Christ,

Who bore the tempest of God's wrath
To be my sacrifice.
Though in the storm I'm blind,
I trust my Sovereign's plan.
I know that my Redeemer lives
And with Him I shall stand.