The fury of the wind,
The raging of the sea,
How small a whisper do we hear
Of our Godâ€™s majesty!
The thunder of His powâ€™r,
O, who can understand?
Before the fullness of His wrath
O, who of us could stand?

â€œShall man find fault with God?â€•
He asks of man below.
â€œNow, gird yourself to answer Me.
And tell Me, if you know:
Who made the earth and sea?
Who speaks and stars obey?
Who plays with creatures of the deep?
Who gives the beast its prey?â€•

C

You, Lord, can do all things,
And none can stay Your hand.
I uttered what I did not know
And could not understand.
Before Your greatness, Lord,
I fall upon my face.
And, by such glory stripped of pride,
I cast myself on grace.

The raging wind and sea
Cause me to flee to Christ,
Who bore the tempest of Godâ€™s wrath
To be my sacrifice.

Though in the storm Iâ€™m blind,
I trust my Sovereignâ€™s plan.
I know that my Redeemer lives
And with Him I shall stand.
